DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1 – 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Microsoft (Microsoft Windows 95 Resource Kit, 1995).

3. With respect to claims 1 and 5, Microsoft discloses a method of creating partitions in a removable device capable of accepting a removable media (page 652, Assigning Drive Letters for Removable Media), said method being characterized by:

communicating between an operating system and a device driver (page 690, device drivers are part of the operating system) in a computer system capable of connecting with a removable device; and allocating drive letters in number equal to a number of plural drives to a single unit of said removable device, when said device driver allocates drive letters to said operating system when said removable media is both loaded in and unloaded from said removable device (page 653, first sentence, The MaxRemovableDrivePartition entry in the Registry allocates the drive letters to be used by partitions on removable media. Alternatively, if the entry is not present the number of drive letters is based on the number of partitions present on the media when the system starts. If the media is subsequently unloaded, the drive letters allocated based on the number of portions are still allocated until the media change is detected).

4. With respect to claim 2, the number of drives is equal to a maximum number of partitions supported by said operating system (MaxRemovableDrivePartition defines the maximum number of partitions supported by the operating system for a removable device).

5. With respect to claim 3, said drive letters allocated to the single unit of said removable device remain valid until being reallocated again; and a number of drive letters derived by subtracting a number of partitions on a medium within said removable device from the number of said drive letters is recognized as being absence of any medium (page 653, second paragraph, Windows 95 recalculates the disk geometry every time a media change is detected).

6. With respect to claim 4, said drive letters comprise arbitrary characters allocated by an operator (page 652, see procedure 'To reserve drive letters for removable media').

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Goshey et al. (US Patent No. 6,205,527) disclose a method of partitioning a removable media where drive letters are allocated to each partition regardless of whether the media is loaded or not.

Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
